

THE SISTERS HAYES - TRAILER 2

Written by

Chaz Wilke

November 11, 2013
(213) 949-0972
ChazWilke@gmail.com

FADE IN:

INT. HAYES RESIDENCE - LIVING ROOM - DAY

A still-life scene where the afternoon sun pours through the living room windows basking everything in warm golden light.

The camera pans across the wall, revealing relics of a past career on Broadway.

Photos of young, fresh faced girls and older men in tuxedos with beaming smiles.

There's a framed Playbill of an old Broadway play below a large one-sheet promoting The Sisters Hayes.

As the camera moves along the wall, it reveals two framed child-sized sequined dresses.

Then the camera turns to reveal a small grouping of figurines sitting on a narrow table by the far window.

The camera begins to dolly in towards the table.

As it does, a faint BUZZING rises.

Slowly the camera begins to focus in on the figurines.

A muffled COMMOTION rises in the background, off screen.

No words can be initially made out, but there's clearly more than one voice.

SOPHIA (O.S.)
(muffled)
She killed him, Scar...

CHLOE (O.S.)
(muffled)
I was startled. It was an accident.

The muffled voices become clearer as the camera is approaches the table.

SCARLETTE (O.S.)
(less muffled)
I understand this.

The BUZZING rises in the soundtrack, combatting the dialogue.

SOPHIA (O.S.)
(clear)
She killed him, Scar!
(MORE)

SOPHIA (O.S.) (CONT'D)
They don't care if it was an accident.
(beat)
Blood for blood.

The camera comes to a rest on a tight shot of the figurines sitting static on the table. Each frozen porcelain face exhibits a cheery and inviting expression.

CHLOE (O.S.)
(clear)
What? No. Please.
(beat)
It was a fucking accident!

The BUZZING ceases.

Suddenly blood splatters across the figurines.

SMASH TO TITLE CARD: THE SISTERS HAYES.