LinkedIn's Updated Marketing Platform Introduces Off-Site Ads

Following a successful acquisition of Bizo Inc. last August, LinkedIn is now launching an updated Marketing Solutions platform that includes new lead-targeting tools and off-site ads for marketers. This updated platform now allows Internet marketers to reach potential leads outside the LinkedIn site ecosystem and across the Web as a whole.

In August, LinkedIn had this to say: "Our long-term vision is to build an integrated marketing and sales platform that provides a simple and effective way to reach audiences, nurture prospects and acquire customers."

And now that vision is becoming a reality with the updated Marketing Solutions platform.

Russell Glass, head of products for LinkedIn Marketing Solution explains to TechCrunch the added benefit the platform received from the acquisition of Bizo. "It allows marketers to capture all the behavior about who's visiting their website, who's visiting their landing pages, and combine that with the intelligence LinkedIn has," he said.

Glass feels this is a huge change to how marketers approached data collection on their customers. He provides a list of statistics on the LinkedIn blog that show the "stark reality" of Internet marketing as it stands:

- 95% of website visitors never provide an email address to marketers.
- Of the 5% who do, only about 20% open the prospecting emails they get afterwards.
- Bottom line: most marketers are converting less than 1% of all possible leads.

Glass sees the room for improvement.

B2B Focus

One big difference between Facebook advertising and the new LinkedIn Marketing Solutions is the target audience. Facebook targets B2C, which as Glass sees it, has a much faster conversion process. With B2B, "these decision-making processes can last for as long as a couple of years," he says.

This is why he doesn't shy away from comparison to the overall marketing strategy of Facebook. Since both platforms are now expanding out beyond the walled gardens of each site's ecosystem. Each will now promote advertisements on sites across the Web. And when pressed on what makes LinkedIn's offering unique, Glass is quick to respond that it's LinkedIn's professional context that makes a big difference.

In August, LinkedIn projected the growth of Marketing Solutions to the sum of $1 billion annually. Now that it is 2015, we have seen the final numbers of 2014 which shows Marketing Solutions has grown 56 percent year-over-year according to the company's most recent earnings report.

Takeaway

LinkedIn continues to create relevance in the online marketing space. Once considered to be just a Facebook for professionals, now LinkedIn is becoming increasingly useful for Internet marketers, especially in the B2B space, to find, nurture, and close leads. With the additional tools and support LinkedIn is pouring in to the Marketing Solutions platform, it appears the company is prepared to invest in this space for the long haul.
