Optimize Your Videos for Biggest SEO Gain

By Chaz Wilke, Staff Writer

You may have considered using video in your affiliate marketing efforts. You might think the cost of video production is too high for whatever SEO benefits you might receive. While your situation is entirely unique to you, videos do offer an added SEO benefit to any affiliate marketing effort.

Consider these few tips provided by Search Engine Watch:

1. Leave No Field Open

You may think that shooting a great video is enough for search engines to optimize your content to the top of the search engine results page. That assumption might not get you the best SEO returns on your hard work on that video.

Be sure to fill any and all text fields available on your preferred video upload platform. YouTube offers multiple meta fields to pump full of keywords and quality searchable information that can subsidize the core message in your video.

It is rumored that these additional fields on a video upload may give an SEO boost to your search engine results page ranking. Some swear by transcription, which is available to you on your YouTube account's Creator Studio page. Consider transcribing the entire video in English and any additional language you feel confident translating. The more languages you include in your transcription plan the more potential SEO benefit you may receive.

2. Don't Skimp on Production Quality

People love beautiful videos. When you have that can't miss idea that you want to make into a video as part of your affiliate marketing efforts, consider the technique and equipment you plan to use.

You might be surprised at the availability of low cost production equipment that can turn your amateur video into something that might widely be considered professional quality.

3. Be Mindful of Mobile

Remember that not everyone is going to be viewing your video on a desktop computer screen. An unignorable percentage of visitors will likely view your video on a mobile device. This will likely change your production requirements, since you will need to be aware that your video could be viewed on a screen as small as four inches. Keep this in mind when planning your video. If you have on-screen text, consider its readability for people viewing your video on a pocket-sized screen.

4. Have a Schedule

The best laid plans of mice and men can often go awry, but with a schedule for your video production, you will likely stick to your deadlines. Without a schedule, the best idea in the world might never actually get made. Scheduling your deadlines will help keep you dedicated to finishing your video, uploading it, and stuffing your meta data with all the necessary keywords and quality content that search engines crave.

5. Keep Them There

Grabbing someone's attention is one thing, keeping it is a whole other ballgame. Be sure to stack the deck in your favor. Find creative ways to incorporate your videos into your existing content. Perhaps include a YouTube sidebar widget on your site. Add a subscribe button to your blog. Include a clickable subscribe link with YouTube's annotation system to all your videos.

If you approach your videos as the commercials that they are, you may find your viewership skyrocket. Including a viable visitor subscription plan to your schedule will help you give the necessary time and attention to growing your viewership, which in turn grows your potential leads and conversion numbers.
