Strengthen Your Online Business Strategy to Get More Leads

By Chaz Wilke, Staff Writer

November 12, 2014

If you work as an affiliate marketer there are two things that likely apply to you. You have a well thought out online business strategy. And you would also love to get more leads. It's no stretch to assume that these two declarations are related. So, let's discuss a few tips on how you can strengthen your online business strategy in the hope that it will help you get more leads.

Automation

You might be saying that you're too busy to strengthen your online business strategy. At first, it may seem like a daunting task. It is true that it may take some time and attention to tweak the fundamentals of what you've been doing to succeed in online business.

The attention that you put on your procedures may take time away from what you might think as more pressing concerns. But if you focus on the core of your business you may find time-saving adjustments that can boost productivity and increase your bottom line. Automation is one of the best examples of a consistent time saver.

You can set parameters on your email marketing campaigns, video marketing, and paid promotions that may continue to generate fresh leads for your online business long after you establish them.

Yasmine Sander, an Internet marketer, notes that one might have initial concerns with the process of establishing automated marketing solutions. "It's not easy to come up with a blueprint like this and define your very own online business strategy for your opportunity."

Mitch Meyerson, contributor at Entrepreneur speaks highly of online business automation despite the initial time investment, which may vary depending on your business. "You'll attract more customers, and spend less time, money and energy winning them over. Automation services and software leverage the best technology available to make you money day and night, whether you're there or not," he says.

Personality

We've discussed the strength of using personality in your business communications previously on this site. Making the switch to incorporate more personality in your online business strategy requires little to no additional work. It is merely a decision you need to make. Every piece of copy, marketing campaign and email blast is an opportunity for you to show more of your own personality.

It's no secret that people love doing business with whom they relate. It may seem scary at first. After all, laying your personality bare in your business dealings may prove the sting of rejection a little more intense. But presenting yourself as a likable and relatable person can turn your conversion numbers skyward.

Avoid Conversion Killers

The ecommerce company Volusion provides a conversion-killer checklist for your reference when looking for ways to strengthen your online business strategy. A few key conversion-killing points include:

- Desperate or Vague Copywriting

You are running a business, not a charity. Your sales pitch should state how your product or service will help your customers. Don't phrase your pitch as a plea. You are a businessperson, not a beggar.

Similarly, if you write vague, confusing copy, don't be surprised when your conversion numbers dip. People may want what you're selling, but if you make the pitch unclear it will stop your leads in their tracks. Write bold, straightforward copy. Tell your potential leads what they need to know and direct them to your established funnel to secure that conversion.

- Poor Navigation

Your website needs persistent navigation. If you notice your main navigation buttons bouncing to different positions on each page, you owe it to yourself to correct that conversion killer. Visitors will certainly not be as familiar with the entirety of your site as you are. Focus on what visitors will see when they navigate your site. Keep the position of your navigation menu the same across all pages on your site, this is what persistent navigation means. Don't lose a sale because a prospect didn't know where to click.

• Default 404 Pages

Directing a potential lead to a page that doesn't exist is bad, but you can help smooth out that accident with contextually relevant 404 pages. Most website hosting companies will allow you to create your own 404 page. Be sure to include the same persistent navigation like the rest of your site, as well as some message that is sure to help your potential leads bounce back to your main site to continue traveling through your sales funnel.

Takeaway

Stay up to date on the latest online business automation solutions that may fit your business strategy.

Use clear and bold communication with an ounce of personality with every piece of copy you write for your online business.

Make sure your visitors know where they're going on your site. Do what you can to help them find their way back from a missing page or broken link.

With just a few tweaks to your online business strategy, you may find that you'll get more leads and a larger paycheck. Some tweaks will take a little time. Some might just require you to change your mindset.
